HOME GUARD PROGRAM TO BE EXPLAINED AT MEETING HERE MONDAY EVENING

Fred W. Rowell of Norway and Rev. John Conoley of Hebron will be the speakers at a meeting at the American Legion Rooms next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The purpose of the occasion will be to give a better understanding of the Legion's program for the formation of Legion Brigades (Home Guards).

Over 30 men and boys have already taken part in one or more of the local drills of the Home Guard which have been held at the hose house and on the Common on Monday and Thursday evenings at 7 o'clock, and it seems likely that this number will be doubled soon.

This is an activity of especial importance now and it should be of interest to every man up to 60 years of age. A large attendance is expected, as the speakers are well known to Bethel people and are able to explain and answer questions on the subject.

CHAMBERLIN PURCHASES NALMEY BUILDING

The Nalmey building and the nearby wooden building on Main Street, formerly owned by Mitchell A. Nalmey, were bought Tuesday by Harold Chamberlin of Bethel. Included in the two buildings are eight apartments, all of which are now unoccupied, also three stores (one vacant) and a barber shop. Occupants are the Labnon Dry Goods Co., Bethel Candy Store, and Herschel Walker, barber.

The Nalmey block is of brick construction and was built by Mr. Nalmey about 20 years ago. Soon after, he renovated the building, next door, finishing it into stores and apartments and connecting to the heating plant in the brick building.

Mr. Chamberlin's plans at present include refinishing the apartments in the brick building and possible improvement of the heating system.

The new owner conducted a fruit business for several years in the quarters now vacant in these buildings and is now engaged in the life insurance business.

INSPECTION NIGHT AT BEAR RIVER GRANGE

State Deputy Ellis M. Davis and wife, also his mother, Mrs. Annie Davis, were guests at the regular meeting of Bear River Grange Saturday night, Sept. 27.

All regular officers were present except Overseer, Gate Keeper and Lady Assistant Steward. Vacant chairs were filled by F. I. French, F. E. Russell and Addie Saunders.

The third and fourth degrees were conferred upon one candidate, with Fast Master E. L. Holt on the Master's chair. Sisters Annie and Olive Davis of Franklin Grange assisted with the degree work.

After comments and suggestions by State Deputy Davis, he gave a very interesting and enlightening talk on Civilian Defense, stressing the need as never before of the full co-operation by all members to perfect this great organization for our own protection as well as others.

The Worthy Lecturer upon request of Sister Minnie Bennett, chairman of the H. and C. W. committee, read the program prepared for the next meeting, which is to be a well-fare program. A supper will be served at 6:30.

The meeting closed in form, with 19 members and three visitors present. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, cookies and coffee were served.

Miss Margaret Tibbets left last Friday to enter Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Md., where she has received a major scholarship.

GOULD LOSES OPENER

Fryeburg defeated Gould last Saturday for the first time since the two schools started football relations. It was an overwhelming defeat too; as though their first taste of victory really spurred them on. The winners presented far the best looking team to ever face the "Blue and Gold" while the local aggregation happened to be one of our most inexperienced elevens, lacking in ability, experience, and numbers.

The Fryeburg eleven, using the "T" formation, showed power and deception, scoring five touchdowns by air and on the ground. Odell at right end proved a capable pass receiver and did a fine job on defense. W. Odell and Doughty starred in the backfield.

For Gould, Bud Ireland, newly elected Captain, played good ball, making some nice run backs of kick offs and also some nice gains from scrimmage. Abbe also made some nice plays on defense but was handicapped by a badly sprained thumb. Coolidge clicked off some nice gains on end runs.

The green and inexperienced Gould team seemed to have learned a few things in their 31-0 defeat as they improved as the game went along, and were playing nice ball as the game ended.

GOULD MEETS GORHAM SATURDAY

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock Gould will play its first home game of the season. The opponents will be the Gorham, N. H., eleven. The visitors will bring a team that will give a good account of itself as is the habit of this out of state rival in all sports. The visitors, however, are not expected to show quite the form and ability of Gould's last opponent and a much better and closer game is expected.

Coach Fortier's charges learned a lot last week and with a few contemplated changes in the line up the team should show to much better advantage. For sport fans this may prove to be one of the most exciting games of the season and as there is only one other home game in the 1941 schedule a good sized crowd is expected.

The game will start promptly at 2 p. m. with Ben Bornstein as referee. He will be ably assisted by Frank Gibson, as umpire, and John Fortunato on the lines.

WORLD WIDE COMMUNION SUNDAY

This coming Sunday, Oct. 5, has been set apart months ago for the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in all Protestant Churches throughout the world. A great deal of planning and work has been given to making this a memorable and most helpful service. Members of all churches are invited to join with the local churches in this unique celebration. It will be an evidence of our Christian unity of purpose in the face of the terrible situation that confronts the world today.

CAMERA ANGLES

Don't let the rule of "hold the camera level" prevent you from getting interesting, effective snapshots. Pointing the camera skyward caught this happy group enjoying their ride.

In almost every book on amateur photography you will find the warning—"hold the camera level." This is a sound bit of advice for the beginner, at least as far as most pictures are concerned. However, like many camera rules, it is often violated to obtain some unusual or special effect.

For subjects that have prominent vertical lines such as buildings, monuments, or similar structures, you should generally adhere to the rule. Suppose, however, you want a striking or dramatic effect. You can then tilt the camera as much as you like. Some excellent pictures have been taken with the camera pointed almost straight up or straight down.

The angle or viewpoint you choose, depends, of course, on the effect you want. A high angle is often helpful in showing details of subjects when the component parts need to be clearly separated. For example, if you can shoot from an elevated position overlooking a golf green, you will be able to show the individual players more effectively. In this case the grass will provide a nice plain background, and the action can be seen much better.

A low angle, with the camera nearly at ground level, and tilted upwards is often used for shots of baseball and football players. This position yields a decidedly more effective picture, and the plain sky accentuates the figures.

You will probably find many other cases in which camera angles may be used. Let the nature of the subject determine the best angle—high, low, or normal.

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

Summarizing Information on the Important Developments of the Week Made Available by Official Sources.

Navy, Ships

Fourteen new ships were launched in "Liberty Fleet Day" ceremonies held at shipyards on Saturday, September 27, at Baltimore, Md., Los Angeles, Calif., Richmond, Calif., Portland, Ore., Quincy, Mass., Chester, Pa., Kearny, N. J., Pascagoula, Miss., Seattle, Wash., and Wilmington, Del. The Navy announced launching of the battleship Massachusetts, three minesweepers—SUMMIT, GUIDE, and IDEAL, and the submarine chaser PC515.

Aid to Britain, Russia

The Navy Department announced 15 British and Free French warships currently in United States ports, and said 12 others already have left U. S. ports where they had put in for repairs or supplies. The War Department said 59 officers and enlisted men of the British armored corps are studying American methods at the Army Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Ky. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced the Soviet Government has already repaid in gold "a little more than half" of the $10,000,000 advanced by the U. S. Treasury to Russia in August.

Production

Assistant Attorney General Arnold, speaking at Yosemite, Calif., said, "there is not an organized basic industry in the U. S. which has not been restricting production... to avoid what they fear may be ruinous overproduction after the war... They have concealed shortages by overoptimistic predictions about supplies."

Mr. Arnold also said "a few strategically located labor unions" were costing the American consumer one billion dollars a year through labor restrictions on production by strikes and boycotts for illegitimate purposes, price fixing, restricting labor-saving devices, elimination of small competitors and owner operators and "tying up huge industries in the struggle to determine which of two unions shall dominate the field."

Small Business

Director Odlum of the OPM Contract Distribution Division announced between 100 and 200 offices to help small shops and business men get defense work will be opened soon. Already scheduled are offices in Hartford, Conn., Providence, R. I., Youngstown, Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind., Rochester, and Albany, N. Y., Portland, Me., Springfield, Ill., Springfield, Mass., Trenton, N. J., Wichita, Kan., and Spokane, Wash. Existing offices at Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Allentown Pa., will be enlarged and the present 39 offices of the abolished Defense Contract Service will continue to operate, he said.

Mr. Odlum asked 56 major defense contractors to appoint "farming out" directors to cooperate in spreading defense work among smaller firms. He also announced defense contracts with five aluminum war companies forced to abandon civilian production by shortages and priorities. Contracts such as these to avoid community hardship can be negotiated up to 15 percent above minimum prices, performance bonds can be waived and splits allowed to enable pools of small firms to obtain contracts for "bits and pieces."

Army Preparedness Status

Assistant War Secretary McCloy, speaking in Jackson, Mich., said the U. S. has an army and an air force "in the sense that one is in process of production... Some of its elements are prepared to meet any foe... Yet that army is just becoming an army."

He said the army has its full amount of fundamental weapons—rifles, bayonets, machine guns, artillery, grenades—but does not have its full equipment of light and medium tanks, anti-tank and anti-aircraft weapons. He said there is sufficient equipment for training but heavy production will not come until this winter or next spring. He said that the Army has much to learn about the tank-plane and anti-tank-plane combinations and "we still have a long way to go in our coordination between air and the ground but we are beginning in earnest in Louisiana now."

He said plane production "at this time is still not satisfactory as a result of shortages in manufacturing facilities and essential raw materials but it is coming up." He said several U. S. planes far exceed any others in the world.

Priorities

Priorities Director Nelson limited production of spare parts for passenger automobiles and light trucks for the period September 15—December 31, 1941 to 60 percent of the number sold during the first six months this year. SPAB said it will extend to American industry assistance in obtaining repair parts.

Anti-Axis 'Black List'

The State Department added 300 South American firms and individuals to the original Anti-Axis "Black List" of 1800 names deleted 65 names where corrective action had been taken since July 17. The new additions included "Air France" and "Lati", a French and an Italian airline, and the German news agency "Transocean." Firms placed on the blacklist are automatically deprived of American oil and gasoline and other supplies from this country.

Agriculture

Agriculture Secretary Wickard told Northeastern farm leaders and agricultural workers Britain will need between now and June 30, 1942 cheese, evaporated milk and dried skim milk that will require processing of more than 4½ billion pounds of milk; a billion and a half pounds of pork and lard; about 500 million eggs; 18 million pounds of poultry meat, and quantities of tobacco, vitamin-rich fruits and vegetables. He said the British need a minimum of $1,000,000,000 in food between now and February 28, 1942.

SPAB announced special attention will be given provision of equipment necessary for expanding dairy production to meet domestic and British requirements. The Agriculture Department said total income from farm marketings will reach $10,000,000,000 in 1941.

Prices

Labor Secretary Perkins said food prices continued to rise during the first half of September with biggest increases in pork chops, lard, eggs, and milk. Price Administrator Henderson said eviction proceedings had been begun by unscrupulous landlords in various parts of the country against tenants who complained or threatened to complain of rent increases to their local Rent Committee.

Inflation Control, Taxation

The Federal Reserve Board increased reserve cash requirements for member banks by about one-seventh, the present lawful limit. The Board said the action will not prevent credit for defense needs and all legitimate requirements.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced his staff has started work on legislation to limit corporation profits to six percent of invested capital for the duration of the emergency. He said the profit motive in war ought to be eliminated entirely. He said the move would also head off the inflationary trend.

Farm Credit Administration Governor Black asked a Washington meeting of leading farm lenders to prevent a speculative boom in farm real estate such as brought bankruptcy to thousands of farmers after the World War. He suggested:

(1) Basing all appraisals in connection with loans on normal values; (2) impressing present borrowers with the wisdom of using higher income available now to payment of existing debts; (3) encouraging savings to meet future debts; (4) avoiding fostering speculative increases in production with out discouraging necessary shifts and increases.

Women and Army Morale

Mrs. William P. Hobby, Chief of the Women's Section of the War Department, speaking in New York said "Let us stop talking about the hard lot of the enlisted men. Every possible provision for the welfare of our soldiers is being made as quickly as is humanly possible. Let us also stop the 'Oh, you poor thing so you're in the Army away from your family and friends?... Keep your handkerchief in your pocket. Instead, invite him home to meet your sons and daughters.'"

Selective Service

Selective Service Headquarters asked local boards to assure college students who are not expected to be called for service before the middle of the college semester they will be granted postponement until they finish the semester. Students preparing for essential defense occupations, Headquarters said, should be deferred.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1941

The greatest tax bill in history is law and this is all-American gloom week for the U. S. Taxpayer. Income taxes for most people will be tripled or quadrupled this year.
Two and a quarter million persons will be paying income taxes for the first time in their lives. Buy an electric bulb, you pay a five per cent tax. Go to the movies, and it's 10 percent. Play bridge and it's 13 cents on a pack of cards, or play pool and it's part of the annual $10 tax on pool tables. You can breathe without taxes hitting you directly or indirectly, but that's about all.
Eat your breakfast, drive your car to work, buy a present for your wife, make a telephone call, there's no escaping the new taxes. And then once you've digested this tax bill, and decided that security and national defense are well worth paying for, there's still something else to lacerate: most experts say this is a mere nothing as compared to the taxes to come next year and the year after that.

Believe it or not, there's a mild sort of silver lining even to this gloom. It goes by the name of Title
VI, Section 601 of the new tax bill.
Credit for this strange-named silver lining goes to Senator Harry B.
Byrd of Virginia who pushed through an amendment to the record amending bill that calls for appointment of a joint committee to recommend cuts in non-defense spending.

This committee to investigate
"non-essential Federal expenditures" will consist of three members each from the House Ways and Means and Appropriations Committees, three each from the Senate Finance and Appropriations Committees, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget. The Committee is authorized to conduct an investigation and recommend as soon as possible eliminations or reductions of non-essential government spending.

High hopes are held for this committee. It marks the first time in some 22 years that Congress has approved something like Congressional budgetary control. And many believe it may save us as much as a billion dollars a year—which even in these days of tossing billions around can come in pretty handy.

ine you to be.—Lavater.

DEFENSE QUIZ

Q. How do I get the highest return on my investment in Defense Savings Bonds?

A. By holding each Bond for full term of years you will secure the full maturity value. A Defense Savings Bond of Series E increases in value 33 1/3 percent if held for 10 years.

Q. Is the Government concerned over whether I buy my Defense Savings Stamps at post offices, banks, savings and loan institutions, retail stores or elsewhere?

A. No. The Government is interested in having as many persons as possible take a hand in the National Defense Program. Toward that end the Treasury is making Bonds and Stamps available for purchase in the largest number of places possible.

Note. To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also Stamps now are on sale at retail stores.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory results. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burns, scalds or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer aching backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up night, swelling, pain in the eyes, feet weak, nervous, allayed out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on secret remedies known only to a few.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH

Penn. Publishing Co.
W. N. U. Service

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Six men traveled the Chibougamau trail in the wilds of northern Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Murders around the camp fires expressed their things. Garry Finlay, whose brother Bob was one of the six, Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide, in the role of surveyors, arrive to investigate the deaths. Finlay had received an anonymous letter declaring that the men were murdered. There is a suspicion that Jules Isadore, big fur man, has made an important gold strike in the Waswanipi country and will stop at nothing to keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in terror of Isadore and his right-hand man, Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER III—On the second day out, as they had safely passed the worst of the rapids, the three investigators were ambushed from shore. Garry and Blaise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV—From Indians Blaise learned ten days later that there is much excitement among them over a "bird" from the south, and that there is talk that three men perished in Nottaway.

CHAPTER V—Finlay and Malone visit Isadore in his magnificent home. A sly attempt to poison them is frustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabistan, chief of the Montagnais, tells Finlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi were shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise.

CHAPTER VII—Wabistan shows Finlay the grave of his brother Bob. Garry identifies the remains and notes the absence of a ring that Bob always wore. Garry learns that Tete-Blanche is hunting him.

CHAPTER VIII—The Indians have been stirred up to believe that the surveyors' transit is an "evil eye" that is causing sickness among their children. Finlay gets a note from Lise, daughter of Isadore, with whom he has fallen in love, imploring him to help her escape from Isadore, whom she fears. Garry has a decoy.

CHAPTER IX—Garry meets Lise in a cave to her appeal. He is surrounded and knocked by Isadore's men after killing three of them.

CHAPTER X—Garry recovers consciousness tied to a tree and suffering from insect bites. The dog, Flame, chews through the leather thong and releases him. Later he is found by Malone and Blaise.

CHAPTER XI—Finlay receives a note from Lise protesting her innocence of the ambush, and warning him that his life depends upon his leaving the country at once.

The canoe was passing the fire. In seconds they'd be clear and lost downstream. Then there was a grating sound as the nose of the Peterboro slid over a sand bar and the canoe came to a dead stop. They were trapped, yards from the shore! Finlay and Red swiftly traded rifles for poles while Blaise strained to free the boat. One false move and they'd draw a blast of fire. They threw their weight desperately on their poles. There came the low call of "Kekway!" from the murk. The three men stiffened.

Crouched in the gloom the crew of the canoe waited for the crash of rifles in their faces. A silence so deep it beat like sound, pulsed in their ears. Ten—twenty seconds and the men in the bow felt the canoe tremble. Blaise's signal to go! Like one man they strained against their poles. There was the scrape of wood on sand, the low wash of water and the canoe was backed clear.

The nose of the boat had sheered off into deeper water when again, the call of "Kekway!" rose from the invisible shore. The three stopped breathing as the boat drifted. Suddenly there was a movement in the waters and spurts of flame from exploding rifles stabbed the gloom. With a savage thrust Blaise jumped the canoe downstream. The enraged alcedo rose under his blanket, but was forced flat. There was a stampede of feet along the shore and full in their faces blazed a barrage of rifle shots. A splinter from the gunwale flicked Malone's cheek. Again lances of flame searched the river for the fleeing canoe.

"Steady!" muttered Finlay, as they raced into the murk.

The canoe grounded and was cleared again while the rifles of the Montagnais spat blindly at the invisible target. At last, far downstream Blaise trailed his paddle.

"Thanks, Isadore, for that whiskey!" panted Red, splashing water on his bleeding cheek. "If it hadn't been for the fact that they were drunk for a fare-thee-well, they'd have slaughtered us on that bar! Good thing we didn't let them have it, though! They'd have fired at the flashes. I thought they'd jump into the canoe."

"They didn't know what they were shooting at, Red! The guards on shore heard the duck pass; then the wash of water when we shoved off. By now they probably think it was one of those bank beaver we saw when we came up the river."

"When Injun gret drunk dey like to shoot de gun," grunted Blaise. "Dey navare know if we pass or not onles nose of canoe leave mark on dat bar. I tink not. De current take care of dat."

"You're right, Blaise," said Finlay. "We had them guessing. And we'll keep them guessing. I wonder if Kinebik has won them all over or if these were only a few of the wild-est Tete-Blanche bribed with Isadore's whiskey."

"It looks like Wabistan had lost all his influence," said Red.

"Mebbe," replied Blaise. "We see." And his long paddle bit chunks from the water.

"Lise was right when she warned that Isadore is trying to bottle us up," said Finlay. "With the Montagnais hunting us all over the lake we'll have to step lively or we'll never see that plane from the north."

CHAPTER XII

Three days later the keel of the Peterboro slid into the gravel beach at the Hudson's Bay post at Matagami. The door of the white-washed log trade-house opened and two men started for the landing. At the gate of the alab dog-stockade surrounding the trader's quarters a tall girl, whose golden bob the sun touched into flame, curiously watched. From a window of the frame house a woman and two half-grown children stared at the three men on the beach, for white travelers were rare at Matagami, buried in the Nottaway wilderness.

"Good day, gentlemen! Welcome to Matagami!" The trader, a sandy-haired man of fifty, shook the hands of the strangers. "I'm Duncan McNab, in charge here, and this is David, my head man."

Finlay introduced himself and his friends. "We passed through the lake some time back, Mr. McNab, on our way in to map Waswanipi."

"Map Waswanipi?" The shrewd blue eyes of the trader pictured his amazement. "You're a government survey party, then?"

"We were," Finlay shot an amused look at Red.

The heavy brows of the trader lifted. "Then you've finished?"

"No. Mr. McNab, we're not on the survey, now, but we haven't finished with Waswanipi." Finlay's face stiffened. "We've come to you for help and information. Then we're going back—to finish."

The clasp of his lean jaw and the points of fire in the speaker's eyes snapped McNab's head forward in a narrow-eyed stare. "I don't get you, Mr. Finlay. Let's talk it out over a pipe in the trade-room. Of course, you'll stay the night with us? We're pretty lonely, here, for a white face. Your men can stow your stuff in that shack. David will show him."

"Thanks," said Finlay. "I'll shut up my dog, too, before there's a fight."

Shortly the three white men sat in the trade-room.

"Now, Mr. Finlay," said McNab, exhaling a cloud of smoke, "would you mind getting down to brass tacks?"

Finlay was measuring the caliber of the man whom circumstances had forced him to trust in order to insure the delivery of his message to the railroad. This trader looked a man full in the eye and had a straightforward way with him. He seemed staunch. According to reports he had been courted by Isadore in the fight for the fur trade.

That was in their favor and should keep his mouth closed. There was nothing to be gained by waiting. "How well do you know Jules Isadore?" Garry suddenly asked.

The veins lifted in McNab's neck and temples as he tore his pipe from his teeth and rasped: "Too damned well!"

Finlay nodded at the grinning Red. "I thought that would be it. Well, Mr. McNab, we're going to tell you a story. It concerns the deaths of six men. First, possibly you'd be interested to look at that." Finlay produced his police badge and handed it to McNab, whose jaws sagged in his surprise. "We're Mounted Police and we're here to have a message relayed to the railroad."

McNab slowly returned the badge. His eyes strayed from the bronzed faces of the Mounties to the lines of their hard bodies filling the wool shirts and whipcord breeches. "Police, eh? I might have known from your eyes and the set of your shoulders. Well! Well! Up on Waswanipi posing as surveyors! So it's Isadore, at last!"

"Yes," said Finlay. "It's Isadore, at last!" Then he described the events of the past weeks while McNab, drawing furiously on his pipe, punctuated the narrative with outraged grunts.

"That's the story, McNab. For the present, not a word, even to your wife. When can you send a canoe to the railroad?"

"We're sending one shortly," he said. "But their firing on you on the Nottaway, then ambushing you, and you supposed to be on the government survey! I can't get over it, Sergeant! Of course I'd heard at the railroad of these reported drownings and had had my suspicions."

"They didn't believe we were on the survey," replied Finlay. Into his gray eyes crept the mist of memory. His voice was rough with pain as he asked: "Did those boys stop here last summer?"

"Yes. Nice boys, too!"

"One was my brother."

"Your brother? Oh, I'm sorry! You didn't say one was your brother when you told of finding their bodies."

"No."

"It's tough, Sergeant Finlay, damned tough! That crook—" McNab stopped his pacing to stand over Garry and shake a thick finger. "Why—why the man's a lunatic—mad as a hermit wolf! He can't get away with this!"

"He's managed to so far."

McNab's face filled with blood as his anger increased. "I've seen a lot—guessed a lot, since the Company sent me here three years ago to try to save the trade on this lake. We learned that Tete-Blanche was bribing our hunters with whiskey to leave us and trade their fur with Isadore. I reported it to the Company and the authorities. His freight was searched at Nottaway but they found nothing. They thought I was trying to hurt him because he was a competitor, and dropped it. I was reprimanded by our District Inspector for bringing charges I couldn't prove. Couldn't prove?" snorted McNab. "I had all the proof in the world."

"I'll bet his liquor comes in by air," said Red.

"Exactly. So he tried to wipe you out—tried to stop a government survey party? Now I wonder just why? What's back of it all?"

"Of course, they must have decided that we were only prospectors posing as surveyors."

"Shooting prospectors is not so dangerous as firing on government men but it's still murder, ain't it?" snorted McNab.

"True!" laughed Finlay trading winks with Red behind the back of the outraged McNab. The trader's hatred of Isadore would be useful. He knew much about Waswanipi which they would learn for the evening would be long. "If you've heard he flies stuff in from somewhere south in the Province, possibly you've heard about the August plane from the Bay," suggested Garry.

"From the Bay?" demurred McNab. "Now what in thunder would he be—wait a minute!" The trader scratched his jaw as his half-shut eyes squinted at a gun-rack in a seeming effort to recapture a vague memory. "I've got it!" he exploded.

"North, at Rupert House, two summers back, they were talking about a strange schooner some traveling Creeks had told of seeing off the mouth of the Huronian. The Indians said a sea-plane was lying in the lee of an anchored ship. Later the plane headed south and disappeared over the muskeg of the mainland. They've been trying to figure that out, at Rupert, ever since."

Finlay glanced triumphantly at Malone. Lise's story was corroborated. "Was it spring, summer or fall they saw it?"

McNab nursed his chin. "Why, let's see! I was at Rupert in early September. It must have been in the summer."

Finlay's face brightened with satisfaction. "McNab, that plane was bound for Waswanipi. Every August a plane from the North stops there, then heads south."

"Waswanipi?" blurted the puzzled trader. "What's the reason for it? What could it carry? All his heavy supplies come down river by canoe and they run into tonnage. His Indians say that a plane from Montreal carries his whiskey, mail and light stuff. Now, what in thunder could a sea-plane lug from a schooner on the Bay and where does the schooner hail from?"

Finlay leaned toward the Scotchman chewing nervously on his pipe stem. "McNab, that's just what Constable Malone and I would like to know."

After a clean-up and shave, Finlay and Red joined the trader at his house for supper. A shy woman whose face wore lines etched by a life of isolation and worry, and an excited girl with an unruly, red-gold bob, and the height and vitality of her father, welcomed them.

"Mary, this is Mr. Finlay and Mr. Malone," said the trader. "Gentlemen, my daughter, Thistle!"

The quick violet eyes of the girl swept Finlay's erect figure and clean-cut features with a passing glance of approval. But it was to Red's freckled face with its infectious grin which bared his regular teeth that the girl's dancing eyes clung. As she laughed at Malone's sallies, dimples dented her brown cheeks.

"What a pair!" thought Garry. "If I know the signs, she's fallen for the devil already."

Throughout the simple meal of trout, bacon, cornbread and wild strawberries, Thistle McNab and Malone had no ears for the general conversation. Red was in his glory but Garry had never seen him so oblivious of his surroundings. It looked like two young people knocked clean off their feet.

That Corinne girl, as Red called her, was already ancient history.

Far into the night three men sat in a cloud of smoke in the trade-room.

"Sergeant," demurred McNab. "It's flat suicide for you to go back there now. I tell you you haven't a chance. But if you do hang on until that plane shows up from the Bay, how are you going to learn if she carries gold south, with that Indian mob of Isadore's watching her? Man, it's ridiculous!"

Malone laughed. "You've never seen Sergeant Finlay operate."

"McNab," said Finlay, quietly, "if we're there when that plane arrives, we're going to learn what all this mystery's about."

McNab's blue eyes snapped. "Yes, I think that's just what you two would start to do in the face of them all. You've got the nerve all right. But have you ever seen what whiskey will do to bush Indians? Tete-Blanche and that crew'll wipe you out, then hide up in the Bitter Water swamps."

"Between muskeg and water and swamp there's fifty miles of it. It's absolutely impassable except for an Indian trail or two. They'd never be found there, Sergeant. I don't want you to go back until you have help."

The gray irises of Finlay's eyes were rings of steel circling the pupils. "That's our hard luck, then. It's our job to get this crook. We'll start; someone else may have to finish it!"

McNab stubbornly wagged his sandy head. "I know, Sergeant, I know! But think of the odds, man! It's fifty to one up there, now, with the Indians against you!"

Red grinned at the grave face of his chief. "At Fort McLeod it was a hundred miners to one Mountie, eh, Sergeant?"

"What happened?" asked McNab. "Sergeant Finlay elbowed his way into that mob of drunks and took his man, Mr. McNab!"

McNab's face lit with admiration. Then he frowned as he returned to his theme. "But these Waswanipi Indians never saw police—don't know what they are! They're bush-wild, I tell you—pagons! The traveling missionaries never could do anything with them. They reek with superstition—believe in Windigos and spirits. This Kinebik with his Evil Eye story and the whiskey have done the trick for Isadore."

"What do you know about this Tete-Blanche—ever seen him?" asked Red.

"I saw him once at the steel. He looked uglier than a starved wolf. Never saw such a face! They say Isadore brought him here from the West, up God's Lake way. He was probably wanted there and had to leave. Two years ago, after those four men were reported drowned, he went up river to Nottaway and hung around making a lot of veiled threats. He had everybody uneasy. The Nottaway people know Isadore is rich and think he has government pull of some kind. They're afraid of him."

"Nobody but the station agent has dared open his mouth and he's been threatened."

Finlay handed the letter he carried in his wallet to the trader. "McLeod did more than talk. He wrote."

McNab returned the letter. "That's what they all think, up there."

"Pretty state of affairs in a free country!" snorted Red.

"About Tete-Blanche!" Finlay's dark face was bitter. "Is he half crazy? The night they trussed me up I had a good look at his eyes. The pupils dilated like those of an Eskimo gone 'pibloktio.'"

McNab squinted hard at the speaker. "You know, I believe he is, just that, blood crazy. I've talked to Montagnais who've drifted here from Waswanipi. They say the Indians are afraid of him. They think he's got some mysterious power—talks with the spirits. But it's this medicine-man, Kinebik, that he works through."

"Isadore's whiskey and Kinebik's medicine-making have turned the young bucks against us," said Finlay. "They won't listen to Wabistan. It's broken the old man's heart but he's still fighting."

"There's a good Indian. I know him well. But he's helpless."

"He's still game, though. I'm meeting him on our return."

"Yes, if you get back through the Quiet Water alive. They'll be waiting for you, you know."

"We'll get back if we have to shoot our way through."

"I hope so."

"By the way, McNab, why did Isadore build such an elaborate outfit?"

"I can't account for it. It must be sheer vanity. He's certainly made big money in fur. But there must be something else. He's got a partner in Montreal, Blondell, who flies here every summer and, I'm sure, carries the liquor. They say he lives like a prince in the city. What my people are wondering, is what Blondell does in Montreal besides handle the fur."

"And they can't find out?"

"No, it's a mystery."

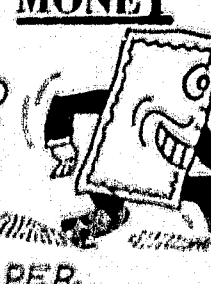

"How about placer gold?" asked Red.

"That's what they've suspected. Flake gold and nuggets would be easy to transport secretly in a plane. He may have struck some rich sandbars in the upper Waswanipi. That may be the answer. But Sergeant," the trader rested his hand on Finlay's shoulder as they parted for the night, "I wish you'd have that police plane sent here and wait for it. They fly to Isadore's place and arrest him. I like you two boys. I don't want you to go back to Waswanipi. With the Indians loose and Isadore not knowing you're police it's deliberate suicide."

Finlay took the trader's big hand. The shadow of the pain which lanced his heart crossed his face as he thought of the boy in his grave beside the thundering Waswanipi. "As yet I've nothing tangible on Isadore except this liquor business with the Indians. Before I'm through I'll have something he'll swing for. I'm not sending for help, McNab. Tomorrow we start back."

THE RANGER'S COLUMN

H. C. Waldo
—Androscoggin District Ranger—
White Mountain National Forest
SEARCH FOR PAMELA HOLLINGWORTH, five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Hollingworth of Dunstable, Mass., has been initiated as the Ranger sits down to write this week's column. The Hollingworths were camping at the White Ledge Forest Camp when "Pammy" disappeared about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

At the present time no clues have been found and the search goes on.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION closing New Hampshire woodlands effective Saturday morning, Sept. 27, at sunrise invokes for the first time the new law passed in the last session of legislature.

The proclamation specifically states that all woodlands are closed except to owners or their agents for lawful purposes and further provides that:

1. Smoking is prohibited
 2. Sawmill operations are ordered suspended
 3. Patrol and fire tools are required in lumbering operations
 4. Hunting, trapping and fishing are suspended without exceptions
- Simultaneous with the Governor's Proclamation Graham ordered the White Mountain National Forest closed and our entire personnel were busy erecting the "Ban" notices before the deadline of 6 a. m. Saturday morning. Immediately, Class 4 fire organization was made effective. Guards and emergency guards were put on special patrol details, crews organized and all lumbering operations suspended.

Maine woodlands are also closed to hunting, fishing, building of fires and smoking by proclamation of Governor Sewall.

In spite of the display of 168 bright yellow ban notices attached to red backboards on this district alone, guards issued 21 notices to appear to people who failed to heed the warning.

HELP PROTECT YOUR WOODLANDS:

1. Tell your friends about the fire danger.
2. Report all smokes no matter how small to the District Ranger or local town warden.
3. Never throw burning material from moving vehicles.
4. Report to the District Ranger or local warden, people known to have entered the woods.

COMPARISON OF RAINFALL for the months of June, July, August and September for the years 1940-1941 is interesting at this time. Surprising as it seems there is practically no difference in rainfall for the first three months of each year as obtained from gauges located at York Pond and the Peabody CCC Camp. September of this year is far behind last year's total.

The records are as follows:

	1940	1941
June	3.68 inches	2.84 inches
July	4.45	6.54
August	3.68	3.91
September	6.90	2.39
Total in	18.71	15.68

During the above months in 1940
